human nature

noun

1. the psychological and social qualities that characterise humankind, especially in contrast with other living things.
2. the character of human conduct, generally regarded as produced by living in primary groups.

A human being is, in the empirical sense, mainly water, the remainder being a selection of diverse elements of the periodic table.

But what makes us who we are and what distinguishes us from other living organisms? One way of examining this is to consider the different and natural ways that we think, feel and act regardless of cultural context.

The artists have explored the diverse elements of human emotion and behaviour and have interpreted them using their own vision, understanding, feeling and experience.

Come and see the results of their exploration in a variety of media.

Open from 13th June until 18th June, 1-7pm daily (1-5pm Tuesday).
