Rina Bakis

Now based in London, International artist Rina Bakis' paintings have always a duality: They are energetic movements and transformations depicting time and space and are sometimes unusual landscapes. Her images are full of colourful shapes and lights making the observers fill with happiness.

Héloïse Bergman

In our current climate of social media, selfies, reality tv and CCTVs, the boundaries of public and private are becoming ever more blurred. Blue Nudes is an experimental project questioning those boundaries.

Gio Cuison

I paint local tradesmen engaged in their daily task around Medway Town as they are my commercial acquaintance. Through the use of sombre colours I try to depict them in the most unpretentious way.

Abbie Denton

Challenging perceptions of the marginalised society intrigues me. Focusing on real success stories opposed to media coverage that dwells on negativity. My work is a spacial exploration of the aura retained in a place with migration in the foreground.

Joe Ellwood

My work is a way for me to deal with what is happening in the world that frustrates, excites or moves me. I like to create works that are fun and satirical and provoke a response or conversation.

Nicola Gurlacz

I am currently working on a series of collages and mixed media pieces focusing on the subject of 'fake news'.

Shahina Jaffer

Note 22 is based on the concept of abstraction and dimension. The background colour of nude and skin pantones are infused with rich colours that are aimed to evoke emotions. The concept is based on a saying by Mark Rothko "A picture lives by companionship, expanding and quickening in the eyes of the sensitive observer".

Selina Mayer

I am a visual artist working with analogue photography with mixed media elements. Made by hand in a traditional darkroom, my prints draw attention to the tactile, physical nature of the piece and the subject.

Parjam Parsi

I write a poem for most of my works. I wrote this for "Integration 12": Like strands of distraught thoughts twisted around the aging tree.

Kirstie Tebbs

Drawing inspiration from the awkward structure and forms in the nature surrounding our everyday lives, Tebbs aims to showcase the presence of individual trees and environments through unlimited perceptions, the infinite, absence and presence.

Nichola Tuohy

I love art and enjoy experimenting with different materials and mediums. The narrative of my artwork is often connected to my personal experiences and the subjects that I hold close. It's somehow little pieces of me released out there in the world.

Adam Turk

I started to do various courses in art at the City Lit in 2002 with no previous training in art and completed a two year fine art course in 2014 at the same institute. Drawing and painting have since become such stimulating forces for me in which I have absorbed an attitude to the life I have lived and continue to live.

Sonya Blanche Vassell

The subject depicts a vibrant and edgy representation of the limitless social and collective desires within modern societies and ideologies, symbolised thoughts and the imagination.

Jonathon David Wilks

Hidden Depths series of abstract paintings: Building multiple layers of acrylic paint within a predefined structure. Depending on the angle viewed and how the light catches the canvas patterns emerge by coincidence, organically formed.

David Woolfson

These paintings, from my Undiscovered Planets series, use space exploration as a metaphor for human imagination, beliefs and feelings. Outer space and the human mind have one thing in common: they are Unlimited.
